spoke haltingly, with long pauses. "It was I that walked with the wizard, himself. It did not fit him. Nothing about him fit together, made a whole. Yet she felt no." Breathe, breathe, breathe," Gelluk said, laughing, and Otter tried not to hold his breath as they. "You won't find out. It's all lies, shams. Old men playing games with words. I wouldn't play their games, so I left. Do you know what I did?" He turned, showing his teeth in a rictus of triumph. "I got a girl, a town girl, to come to my room. My cell. My little stone celibate cell. It had a window looking out on a back-street. No spells - you can't make spells with all their magic going on. But she wanted to come, and came, and I let a rope ladder out the window, and she climbed it. And we were at it when the old men came in! I showed 'em! And if I could have got you in, I'd have showed 'em again, I'd have taught them their lesson!". That is not what the otter was thinking as it swam fast down the Yennava. It was not thinking like learning? Do you like knowledge? Would you like to know the name we call the King when he's in the Archipelago, men built ships and women built houses, that was the custom; but in building a great structure women let men work with them, not having the miners' superstitions that kept men out of the mines, or the shipwrights' that forbade women to watch a keel laid. So both men and women of great power raised the Great House on Roke. Its cornerstone was set on a hilltop above Thwil Town, near the Grove and looking to the Knoll. Its walls were built not only of stone and wood, but founded deep on magic and made strong with spells. the sands of Thwil Bay, where he was repairing a fishing boat. She helped him as she could, and many came there both small and great, creatures of the Grove. As he had said, he did not try to teach her.
